Maria's friend Trevor has always had a crush on her, to the point where it's just sad. Her status is much higher, she is beautiful and accustomed to being treated like a princess. Low status male friends exist only for attention and lavish gifts, nothing else. She is a runner, a fierce competitor and far too proud to say no when Trevor bets that he could outrun her to the top of a hill.

It's hard for her to keep a straight face, there is no way he could beat her with that doughy physique. It isn't until she's on the ground, panting, at the top of the hill with her friend standing over her, full of mirth, that she realizes that she has made a terrible mistake.

Maria undergoes a transformation filled with shame, humiliation, disgust and pleasure she can't push away. She becomes a puppet in the hands of her friend and soon discovers just what he has in store for her.

A bet is a bet after all.
