Author Uwem Akpan is a Nigerian-born Jesuit priest whose first short story, "An Ex-Mas Feast," was published in The New Yorker's Debut Fiction issue. The story's portrait of a family living together in a makeshift shanty in urban Kenya gives a matter-of-fact reality to the most extreme circumstances -- and signaled the arrival of a breathtakingly talented writer. Each story in this stunning collection imagines the lives of children in a different African nation. "My Parents' Bedroom" is a Rwandan girl's account of her family's struggles to maintain a facade of normality amid unspeakable acts. In "Fattening for Gabon," a brother and sister cope with their uncle's attempt to sell them into slavery. "Luxurious Hearses" introduces us to a Muslim boy who relies on his faith to bear a treacherous bus ride through Nigeria. Every story is an immersion into a child's mind that reveals how love, humor, and delight endure, even in the face of the most agonizing situations our planet can offer. A work of soul-renewing openness, Say You're One of Them will spark the minds and hearts of all who read it.
