Connor Black doesn't believe in the supernatural, and that's about to bite him in the ass.

Connor's life gets interesting when a new writer joins his video game studio. Sparks fly; Wendy is pretty, intelligent, and definitely into Connor—but careful never to reveal much about herself.

And before long, Connor has his own secrets to worry about: a tattooed stranger attacks and nearly kills him, giving no explanation. Angry but mystified, Connor doesn't tell anyone what happened, and tries to put the attack behind him—and he tries to convince himself that the weird little things he's starting to notice about Wendy aren't really that weird. Stressed and sleep-deprived, with the looming deadline of a multi-million-dollar video game launch weeks away, Connor just doesn't have time to deal with 'weird'.

But when the evidence trail of an horrific crime begins to lead back to Connor himself, Connor must seek out answers to the questions he's been avoiding, even if it means risking his own life and sanity—and the lives of those around him.

With YOUR NAME, IN FIRE, new author Kera Emory spins a modern, deconstructed vampire tale with a black sense of humor and a deeply nerdy heart.
