Alterações Clínicas e Laboratoriais da Erlichiose Experimental em Cães: Infecção experimental por Ehrlichia canis em cães (Portuguese Edition) Veronica Jorge Babo-Terra

Este trabalho aborda as principais alterações clínicas e laboratoriais de cães infectados experimentalmente com Ehrlichia canis e acompanhados por 9 meses. Foi realizada a reação de Imunofluorescência Indireta (RIFI) durante todo o período da pesquisa e alguns animais desenvolveram títulos de anticorpos do tipo IgG, alcançando níveis tão altos quanto 1:65.536, sem relação com a manifestação de sintomatologia. Foram observadas mórulas em monócitos e plaquetas nos animais estudados, alertando que a presença de mórulas em plaquetas de cães não é restrita à infecção por Anaplasma platys.
