Paris is a marvellous city for books lovers: the capital being at the heart of European literary traditional. In the historical centre, La Cite, the books stands dotted along the quays of the Seine since 1789 are a monument to the city's love of the written word. From Saint-Germain-des-Pres to Montparnasse, passing by the Latin Quatier, Paris' publishing houses and bookstores have fuelled the intellectual and artistic circles since the 40s. In Paris, each museum has its own bookstore, each ? quartier ? its library. When it comes to bookstores, there are over 1000, of which at least 92 are in the 6th district of Paris!
